Don't write a or an if the word in front of it is uncountable ( don't say a about a single mind but you can say how many people are there with an amazing mind )

I went somewhere
DID you go somewhere

All the talk of past perfect and pluperfect tenses can be overwhelming, so remember this: the simple past takes simply "went." But if you're talking about something that happened before another action (past perfect), you need "had" and the past participle "gone."

I remember playing a Roblox creepypasta rp game at one point where I played truth or dare with other people it was the type of hanging out that I liked and would want more of

We were upstairs in the bedroom sitting around

I think I was Slenderman at that point

( I DO remember that, one person was glitching outside or glitching into the window, I even went outside and got on the roof to see what's going on but that's a vague memory because I can't remember exactly if it even happened or not )

thanks past me I completely forgot about that... and it still is because I don't remember adding this anywhere efficient... I forgot this word and I stopped myself from googling it to try to remember the word it most likely took me 1.5 minutes to remember it at first I thought this was the document where I kept forgotten words but apparently not yes I see you reading this, thanks for returning... I hope
